

A close-up photograph of a forest floor. The ground is covered with a mix of brown, tan, and grey organic matter, including small twigs, dried leaves, and bits of bark. Scattered throughout are several bright green leaves, some of which are partially covered by the brown debris. The lighting is natural, creating soft shadows and highlights on the various textures of the forest floor.

Natur unter der Lupe

von Tom

